NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Within the next few days, Premier Primo De Rivera, of Spain, will discuss with his cabinet the formal revocation of the ancient edict expelling the Jews. It was issued in 1492 by Ferdinand and Isabella.

It is one of the paradoxes of history that the year which saw the discovery of the great land of opportunity across the seas should exile a race from the country where it had enjoyed one of its happiest cultural periods.

"When the Jews are permitted to return to Spain it will mark one of the greatest romances of history," today said Dr. S. Margoshes, editor of the Jewish Day, and one of the leaders behind the movement for the migration to Spain of the Jews of Eastern Europe.

"For when the Jews were expelled from Spain in the days of Christopher Columbus, they took the oath never to return to Spain again. The 500 years before the expulsion was the 'golden age' of Jewish history in which were produced scientists, philosophers and writers, not least of them being Spinoza.

"The descendants of these exiled Spanish Jews have never forgotten their Spanish homeland. Through the centuries of their exile it has been a case of separated lovers and a great longing for the land of their greatest cultural glory. There are 70,000 to 80,000 Spanish speaking Jews in Europe today, most of them still speaking the pure Castilian tongue.

"That is the sentimental side of the movement. But, of course, most of the potential immigrants will go to Spain for economic reasons."

Dr. Margoshes estimated that there were at least a million Jews in Russia, Poland and Rumania and would migrate, if given the opportunity, on account of economic distress and political persecution.

"The advantages to both sides are very clear of the potential bargain to be reached between the Spanish government and the Jewish race," the Jews will find a place where they said Dr. Margoshes. "It means that can make a living free from persecution.

"As for Spain, she will receive a virile and enlivening of its economic life through such a migration, and the result is bound to enhance its commercial relations with the rest of the world.

"Millions of dollars will be poured into Spain to assist the new immigrants in building factories and in other industrial projects which may give them employment. We plan to raise a $10,000,000 international fund for this purpose.

"In addition, $60,000,000 is sent each year from the United States to Europe by American relatives of European Jews. A good part of this sum is certain to be sent to the Jewish immigrants in Spain. Hence, the commercial ties between Spain and the United States will be strengthened."

Dr. Margoshes also pointed out that the revocation of the edict by Spain would put the government in a more favorable position to negotiate foreign loans from world banking houses controlled by Jews.

CORPORAL WELSH FINDS A CARLOAD OF LOOT

Stops Car Which Forced His Machine Off The Highway

HAD GARAGE OUTFIT

FALLSINGTON, Jan. 8.—When Corporal Harry B. Welsh, of the State Highway Patrol, overtook an automobile which forced his machine from the Lincoln Highway here, he found the machine was stolen and that it was loaded with tools and garage equipment valued at more than $600.

Consequently, he arrested the three occupants of the car who gave Trenton addresses. They are Warren Stetson, also known as John J. Healey, 13 Carroll street, 30 years old; John A. Fone, 957 Princeton avenue, 40 years old, and John Wagner, 39 years old, who gave his address as the American Rescue Workers Headquarters, on Perry street.

The automobile in which they were riding is the property of Major John B. Gossett, of the American Rescue Workers, and was stolen from the garage of William J. Petry, 230 Allen street, as were the tools. Stetson is said to have been employed in the Petry garage and gained entrance with a key which he had in his possession.

Stetson is being held on charges of reckless driving and bringing a stolen automobile into the State. Federal authorities will be asked to take a hand in the latter charge. Fone and Wagner are being held as witnesses.

Trenton police are anxious to obtain custody of the men so they can charge them with burglarizing the garage and stealing the automobile.

Corporal Welsh was driving his machine at Fallsington when the stolen car approached. It was being driven in a reckless manner, he declares, and swerved toward him, causing him to steer off the road.

The officer immediately gave chase, overtaking the speeding machine after a race of nearly a mile. He declares the three occupants had been drinking and could give no explanation of how the garage equipment, consisting of electric drills, electric valve grinders, tapset sets, spark plugs, etc., came to be in the machine.

Stetson, who was driving, had no driver's license, but produced a 1929 permit which bore the name of Healey and the Carroll street address. Several envelopes in his pockets bore the name Stetson, which he says is his right name. His home is in Newton, Mass., the prisoner told the authorities.

Fone and Wagner deny participating in the garage robbery or the theft of the car. They were in an East Trenton "speakeasy" while the theft was being committed, the men told the police, and were picked up there by Stetson.

Their plan, the men say, was to take the tools to Philadelphia, and sell them, after which they were going to abandon the automobile.

PERKASIE ORDINANCE MEANS CLOSED SUNDAY

Vote Passes Council 5 to 3
After A Stormy
Hearing

MANY CITIZENS PRESENT

PERKASIE, Jan. 8.—After hours of impassioned debate and with the council chamber thronged with citizens, Borough Council passed a drastic Sunday closing ordinance which, it is predicted, will close Menlo Park permanently and make Perkasio the "tightest" town in Eastern Pennsylvania.

Sunday football, baseball, in fact, all amusements which have brought thousands to the North Penn borough, are prohibited unless Burgess Carey Goff, just inducted for a second term, vetoes the measure. The official declined to say today what action he will take, intimating that he will reserve decision until the next meeting of Council.

The throng of citizens in the Council chamber repeatedly expressed themselves as antagonistic to the ordinance as the debate continued with legal talent entering the discussion.

Henry Wilson, owner of Menlo Park, an amusement center within the town limits, is reported as being ready to sell the park to a Negro organization of Philadelphia if the ordinance is approved.

Attorney Harry E. Grim of Perkasio made a plea for Wilson.

"There was a time," he said, "when the Pharisees maintained it was sinful for men to do anything except attend the synagogue on Sunday. There is no sin committed in riding in a 'scooter' on the Sabbath. This ordinance is the most hideous thing that has ever come up in this town."

Attorney Grim evoked an outburst from the crowd when he said the bill was hypocritical, since it applied only where admission is charged, and demanded to know what right morally the borough had to make and sell him electricity on the Sabbath, or to permit cigar stores and restaurants to operate.

Councilman L. A. Pritchard, chairman of the committee which prepared the measure, said the question was not religious, but that the whole proposition was in direct accord with the fundamental proposition that the sanctity of the American Sabbath must be preserved.

"We've been threatened, gentlemen," he said, "threatened right here in Perkasio. I pray God no such thought ever entered the hearts of our people." Council passed the measure by a five to three vote. Those for the ordinance were Jesse Gulick, Clayton Myers, Harvey S. Kulp, L. A. Pritchard and William Moyer. Those voting against the bill are Harry Kramer, Frank Hunsberger and Harry Blitzer. President Samuel F. Stover did not vote.

STUDENTS TO PRESENT NEEDS TO PARENTS

Clubs and Organizations At Bensalem to Discuss
Their Problems

OTHER SCHOOL NOTES

BENSALEM TOWNSHIP HIGH SCHOOL, Cornwells Heights, Jan. 8.—Various organizations and clubs connected with the school will present their needs before the Parent-Teacher Association at its business meeting on Thursday evening.

It is the plan of those in charge of the program to have the problems of needed articles and equipment from all of the associations connected with the school thus placed before the parents and teachers, in order that the needs might be alleviated in as many cases as possible.

This program was to have taken place at the December meeting, but owing to inclement weather no session was held, and the plan will be carried out tomorrow evening.

A special meeting of the school board took place at the school last evening, at which time matters of the building program were discussed.

"Joan of Arc" was the subject of a most pleasing address given by the Rev. J. B. Deaver Cook, pastor of the Cornwells Heights, M. E. Church, before the students at assembly period last Friday.

Rehearsals for the senior class play, "The Odd Job Man," are coming along nicely. Miss Jane Kohler, a member of the faculty, is the coach. Tickets are on sale for the two presentation nights, January 16th, at the Cornwells M. E. church hall, and January 17th at the Trevoise community house.

Members of the school faculty and students were pleased to greet Alvin T. Lippincott, a former member of the school board at the school a few days ago. Mr. Lippincott, who has been ill, is improving gradually.

Plastering in the new portion of the school structure here is now completed, and some equipment for the gymnasium and other departments has already arrived.

PHILANTHROPIST WILL WED IN PHILA. TODAY

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—(INS).—Julius Rosenwald, Chicago's multi-millionaire mail-order king and world renowned philanthropist, will be married in Philadelphia today to Mrs. Adele Goodkind, according to persistent reports here, partially confirmed by a member of Rosenwald's family.

Statements of Mrs. Max Adler, a sister of Rosenwald, made in reply to questions of newspapermen, practically confirmed reports of the impending nuptials. Mrs. Adler, guarded in her statements, was extremely reluctant to discuss the affairs of her brother.

"Mrs. Goodkind," she said, "is a splendid woman who can give Mr. Rosenwald the kind of companionship he needs. She has the same sort of ideals he has, and she has similar mental processes."

"Mr. Rosenwald has been a very lonely man of late and a very tired man, mainly because of the pressure exerted upon him by his philanthropic work."

She said, however, it was her understanding that Rosenwald was to be married after he completed his contract. (Continued on Page Six)

DR. STRATHIE IS NAMED CHAIRMAN OF SCOUT DISTRICT

Has Served for Many Years
As Chairman of Newtown
Troop Committee

CHURCHVILLE WORK

Chalfont Lads Enjoy Week-
End Trip to Camp Buccoo
With K. Lane

Dr. A. J. Strathie, Newtown, was elected district chairman of the Delaware Valley District at the annual meeting of the Boy Scout District Board.

Dr. Strathie has served for many years as chairman of troop committee of No. 1, of Newtown, and then of No. 2 of Newtown. During the past two years he has served on the Executive Board of Bucks County Council, and for some time has been chairman of the county publicity committee, as district chairman. Dr. Strathie will serve as second vice president of Bucks County Council.

At the board meeting, Samuel J. Hlick, of Hulmeville, was elected first vice chairman and Dr. Ralph Fox, of Morrisville, second vice chairman.

In addition to the annual election of officers there was a thorough discussion of the council activity program for the next four months, and a brief outline of the coming council expansion program for the next two years. Deputy Commissioner Lloyd S. Bucher prepared a comparative scale of the inspection reports of the troops in his section, which was of the utmost interest to the chairman of the troop committees from his territory.

The trustees of the Churchville Reformed Church have rebuilt the lower floor of the barn on the church property into one of the finest troop meeting rooms in Bucks County. For initiative and for sight in the interesting of young people in their church, the Churchville church has taken a step forward in providing proper facilities for their scout troop. The main meeting room has been so arranged that articles of scout craft can be displayed on the walls and a disappearing ladder arrangement has been devised so that access can be secured to the upper floor of the barn for social periods.

Deputy Commissioner Kenneth Lane took a number of the scouts from his old troop, Chalfont No. 1, to Camp Buccoo during the last week-end. Very crude arrangements were made last summer at Camp Buccoo to arrange for eight boys and a leader to sleep in the scout headquarters during week-ends in the winter periods. A coal stove has been placed in the front part of the Scout headquarters building for warmth, and with sleeping accommodations for the group in the rear of the building, Cornwells No. 1 and Chalfont No. 1 have been the two troops enjoying the most "excursions" to Buccoo. The scouts with Deputy Commissioner Kenneth Lane passed many scoutcraft tests and enjoyed a program full of games, unlimited eats, stories, and a real woodmen's campfire. The Boy Scouts taking the trip were: Eugene Bricklemeyer, Samuel Cantely, Gilbert Carlin, William Carlin, Harry Heistrich, Walter Heistrich, Ernest Mintel, and Ronald Wilson.

CROWN PRINCE UMBERTO

WEDS PRINCESS MARIE

By Guglielmo Emanuel

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
ROME, Jan. 8.—In a magnificent ceremony which carried this twentieth-century city back to the feudal splendor of the Middle Ages, Crown Prince Umberto, the future king of Italy, took his childhood sweetheart for his bride today.

A galaxy of royalty, including kings, queens, princes and princesses from every reigning house of Europe, were present when the heir to the Italian throne was wedded to Princess Marie Jose, beautiful daughter of King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium.

But while the Princess was being married to the heir to the Italian throne within the palace, there was a sinister note in the streets outside, as heavily armed Fascist guards and plainclothes policemen kept a constant watch to see that no anarchistic attempt was made.

The discovery of a number of plots directed against the Princess and members of her family, caused the Italian authorities to take extraordinary precautions to prevent any untoward incident. All suspected characters were arrested.

WHOOPIES IN SECOND PLACE IN LEAGUE NOW

Defeated Fighting Five With Score of Twenty to Nine

TULLYTOWN CONTEST

By T. M. Juno

By defeating the Fighting Five last night, the Whoopies remained within striking distance of first place in the A. O. H. League. Final score stood 20-9.

The Fighting Five lacked the spirit they possessed throughout the season and at no time was in the race for the game.

Dave Ennis topped the counters of the fray by totalling seven points. Captain "Mike" Downs of the Fighting Five played exceptionally hard and gathered five points to lead his five. H. Brady scored the other four while the rest of the team drew blanks.

In the second A. O. H. League game of the evening, the Arrows won their second consecutive win within the last week by out-playing and beating the tail-end Shamrocks, 28-21.

Both teams showed good form and the running was close all the way, but teams held the lead at various stages of the game but at sudden spurts towards the end of the game meant victory for the Arrows who are still in the race for the top-notch position of the league.

Jimmy Lake with six field goals and three foul goals for a total of fifteen points was high scorer. Fallon led the Arrows with twelve points. John Mulligan deserves much credit for the Arrows' win because of his excellent work on the defense.

COUNCILMANIC ACT BAFFLES ONE WHO "DISCOVERS" IT

If Interpreted As It Reads, The Entire Present System
May Be Illegal

MAY BRING CHANGES

New Act Provides That Representatives Be Elected
At Large

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 8.—If a new act of the State Legislature discovered by a Quakertown lawyer yesterday for the first time "means what it actually reads," the entire system of borough organization in the incorporated towns of Pennsylvania under the present system may be illegal.

It is possible that borough councilmen will have to resign and be re-appointed if the new law should be in operation.

Gordon H. Luckenbill, Quakertown attorney, was transacting business at the Bucks County Commissioners' office here yesterday when he showed the Commissioners the new act known as "No. 253" approved April 18, 1929, and signed by Governor John S. Fisher, and published in 1929 edition of "Laws of Pennsylvania."

Under the present system councilmen are elected by wards in incorporated towns and the president is selected from the council members. Practically all boroughs have three councilmen from each ward and in Bristol there are eighteen councilmen in the six wards.

The new act provides: "Be it enacted that the town council of all incorporated towns of this Commonwealth shall consist of six councilmen and a president of the town council. At the municipal election in 1929, six councilmen shall be elected at large by the voters in each such town, three for terms of two years and three for terms of four years each."

"Biennially thereafter, at each municipal election, three councilmen shall be elected for terms of four years each. At the municipal election in 1929 and every four years thereafter, a president of the town council shall be elected by the voters for a term of four years."

The last section of the act reads in part: "That all other acts or parts of acts, general, special or local, that are inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed."

The Bucks County Commissioners today sought the advice of the Attorney General of Pennsylvania in an effort to get a correct interpretation of the law.

Throughout Bucks county, and it is believed that boroughs in other counties did the same thing, councilmen more than six members were elected in most instances and all of them by wards, and not "at large." The president has always been elected by members of council.

"Such a law would be a farce," said A. Harry Clayton, president of Doylestown Council today. "It would mean that such a law would result in some instances in all councilmen being elected from the same ward."

Lawyers and borough solicitors were "at sea" when asked to interpret the law.

TOO MANY MASTERS

Like the spot that awoke the guilty conscience of Macbeth, recollections of and speculations on the stock boom and crash of the now dead but not forgotten year of 1929 will not out. The post mortem has not been concluded and the whys and wherefores continue to pour forth in many streams from many sources.

Carl Snyder, chief statistician of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, has just completed his own analysis of the phenomena of the extraordinary speculative period through which the nation has but recently passed.

He finds that instead of being attended by extraordinary business expansion its chief characteristic was an overproduction of a spurious sort of capital; spurious, that is, in the sense that while ostensibly raised for the needs of business, much of it was not so employed, but poured back into the market of speculation in the form of call loans to breed more capital and pyramid a house of cards.

This explanation clarifies a point that puzzled the public for several years. Many could not understand why the rapid increase in invested capital was not accompanied by a corresponding increase in production. Now they know that the multiplication of securities flotations was a deceptive measure of industrial progress. Money was raised not because it was required to finance expansion, but largely because it was easy to get; because, once obtained, it could be loaned out at rates more remunerative in many instances than the gains of industry.

Dollars that serve too many masters, as in credit pyramiding, are headed for the precipice that always bounds inflation.

STIMULANT

Perhaps because the federal administration has assumed leadership in the "Forward America" movement—a Hooverian idea—business and the public have overestimated the part federal public works will play in stabilizing business and preserving national prosperity. Washington may furnish the stimulant but not the sustaining nutriment.

Last year the federal government spent $232,000,000 for permanent public improvements. The expenditure for the present fiscal year is estimated at $281,000,000. President Hoover's program calls for an increase of $75,000,000 in appropriations for public works next year.

These federal appropriations appear as real factors in the economic scheme until compared with state, municipal, county and private outlays for construction work when they pale into insignificance.

Twenty-six states have appropriated a total of $825,000,000 for public works in 1930. The federal total is but a fraction of that. And last year the national government financed less than four per cent of all construction work.

So, so far as the central government is concerned its contribution to the "prosperity reserve" program must be relatively small. But the president recognizes that fact. It is his hope that the national administration will aid chiefly by co-ordinating federal with state and municipal construction, which is about 11 times as great.

SYNOPSIS

It is ten-thirty on a morning in the early autumn in New York City. In the Q. R. S. A. radio broadcasting station, announcing itself as The Voice of the City, the usual activities are going on. Beauty specialists, musicians, children's hour conductors, jazz bands—all are broadcasting. Arthur Phillips, general manager of the station, is in conference with two automobile agents, Swanson and Jones, who have come to complain about the talent used during their "hour" on the air. Phillips suggests that they try Joe Lane, the song plugger, to "pep things up."

"Will he? What does he do?" Jones inquired hopefully.
 "What does he do? Joe Lane!" Phillips looked at the man in well-feigned astonishment. "You mean to say you haven't heard of Joe Lane? You haven't heard him over the radio? Why, he's the hit of our station. Slugs like nobody's business."
 "Like nobody's business, eh?" Swanson piped up, his voice caustic. "Then we don't want him, do we, Jones?"
 Phillips laughed. "Come on." He took Swanson and Jones by the el-tomers, and that's why I've brought them to you. I told them they were just the person to make things lively for them." The general manager lowered his right eyelid in the faintest suspicion of a wink in Lane's direction.

"That's swell!" Joe enthused. "Have you gentlemen any suggestions?" he asked Swanson and Jones.

"Well, now, I'll tell you," Swanson began. "I heard a fellow once singing a song, 'I'm Gonna Smother My Mother with Kisses When I Get Back to My Home in Tennessee.' Couldn't we get a number like that—only different, you know."

Joe rolled his eyes. "I'm gonna smother my mother with kisses when I get back to my home in Tennessee. Um-mm, let's see," he ruminated. Then he brightened quickly. "Sure, I got it! I'm gonna smother my mother with kisses when I get back to my home in old Vermont! How's that!"

"I think we should get farther away from it than that," Swanson replied seriously.

"Why, Vermont's a couple thousand miles from Tennessee," Lane wisecracked. "It's all right—it's all right!" He raised his hand as though to ward off a blow. "You ain't gotta like it. There's lots more where that come from. Now bows and propelled them towards the corridor. "I'll let you hear him. See, what time is it?" He consulted his wrist watch. "Almost twelve. He's down in the rehearsal room, now. And you never heard Joe Lane. Well, you've got a treat coming to you. Why, I didn't think here was anybody alive who hadn't heard Joe Lane."

Talking, Phillips led the way past many doors until he came at last to one bearing a shining brass sign that announced in large letters: Rehearsal Room.

"Here we are." He pushed open the door and motioned for the automobile agents to enter.

Vibrant, cubistic designs of gold, red and black paneled the walls at uneven intervals and sped, lighting-like, across the high ceiling. Squat chairs, tapestried in the same pattern, were scattered here and there. A low table with triangular legs stood to one side. Several ash stands filled with cigarette stubs dotted the highly polished, parquet floor. At the far end of the room a good sized orchestra, now at rest, was arranged on either side of a low platform. On the platform a figure gesticulated, turning now to the right, now to the left.

"Now look, boys! Get a little more of this in it! Um-pah! Um-pah! Let's make it hot! Pass the mustard!"

"That's Joe Lane," Phillips pointed to the man on the platform. "Biggest radio hit in town. Writes his own songs—sings 'em—everything!"

"I'll introduce you to him. He's working on one of his own songs." Phillips started across the floor, followed by Swanson and Jones. "Oh, Joe," he called.

Lane stepped down from the platform and came towards the visitors. "Lo, Art, hows boy?" he greeted the manager.

"Fine, Joe. I want you to meet these gentlemen," Phillips began. "Mr. Swanson, this is Joe Lane, greatest radio attraction of the day. And Mr. Jones, Joe Lane."

"Glad to know you," Lane shook hands with the two men.

Swanson and Jones looked the celebrity up and down speculatively. They saw a tall, well built young man with broad, massive shoulders and strong, firm hands. They saw black hair growing well back on the forehead, surrounding a genial face bronzed by the sun. They saw a wide mouth that broke into a quick, friendly smile; an impetuous mouth that matched impetuous brown eyes—eyes that could twinkle or go suddenly still and dark. He wasn't what the younger generation would call a "sheik," exactly. Swanson and Jones decided.

"These gentlemen are the distributors of the Excelsior automobiles, Joe," Phillips was explaining. "They want to try something new on their radio hour—want to pep it up. They're one of our best cus-let's see. I'm gonna smother my mother with kisses when I get back to my home in Tennessee," he hummed. "I'm gonna smother my mother—smother my mother—"

"Stop clowning, will you, Joe, and do a little thinking," Phillips was growing slightly impatient. If Katherine came in—he wanted to see her—had to see her first—

"All right, sweetheart," Lane agreed, becoming serious. "Listen, I've just been rehearsing a new number—one that I wrote myself. But that's not saying it ain't good."

"Let's hear it," Phillips commanded.

"Come on, boys. Strike up the band! Play that music, Pub-lee-ee! Nice an' hot! Pass that mustard!"

The members of the orchestra picked up their instruments. Swelling, falling, the wailing tattoo of rhythm beat upon the air. The saxophone moaned and shrieked, sobbing with a crying jag.

"The bird with feathers of blue is waiting for you. Back in your own back yard..."

Joe Lane's eyes were rolling. His shoulders moved up and down, back and forth. His feet began to slither around on the floor. He threw up his head; his voice rolled out, rich and full; he clapped his hands.

"You'll find your happiness lies Right under your eyes... Give it out!"

Back in your own back yard." Swanson and Jones stared, fascinated. There was something compelling about this man when he sang. He made you listen to him. He put himself into the song. He made you believe the very words he uttered. It was jazz—but a jazz apart from the ordinary. It was jazz with a soul. Quiet descended upon the room. The orchestra stopped playing. Lane, proud and happy, looked at the visitors.

"Could you care for that in a big way?" he grinned, his eyes sparkling.

"Well, let's see," Lane was amenable to any suggestion. "Maybe we could do something like this: 'The car with painting of blue is waiting for you, Back in your own back yard... Excelsior!'"

"No, that's not so good," Swanson objected. "The gear shift is what we're interested in."

"Listen, Joe, you can figure this out yourself," Phillips interrupted. "I've got to get back to the office. You don't mind, Mr. Swanson... Mr. Jones... I've got an appointment in a few moments—important conference. Mr. Lane will fix everything up for you, I know. I'm sure you'll be satisfied with his work. Remember, he's the biggest hit in radioland."

With a smile and a nod to Lane, Phillips hurried across the room and disappeared into the corridor.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN The Straight Thinker

He said this: "Property is the fruit of labor; property is desirable; it is a positive good in the world. That some should be rich shows that others may become rich, and hence is an encouragement to industry and enterprise. Let not him who is houseless pull down the house of another, let him work diligently and build one for himself, thus by example assuring that his own shall be safe from violence when built."

Many people, who have thrift accounts with us, are acting on this very principle.

Many who wanted homes, got them by the industry and enterprise that Lincoln speaks of. Got them, also, because our plan of home ownership was practical and convenient.

TOO MANY MASTERS

Like the spot that awoke the guilty conscience of Macbeth, recollections of and speculations on the stock boom and crash of the now dead but not forgotten year of 1929 will not out. The post mortem has not been concluded and the whys and wherefores continue to pour forth in many streams from many sources.

Carl Snyder, chief statistician of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, has just completed his own analysis of the phenomena of the extraordinary speculative period through which the nation has but recently passed.

He finds that instead of being attended by extraordinary business expansion its chief characteristic was an overproduction of a spurious sort of capital; spurious, that is, in the sense that while ostensibly raised for the needs of business, much of it was not so employed, but poured back into the maw of speculation in the form of call loans to breed more capital and pyramid a house of cards.

This explanation clarifies a point that puzzled the public for several years. Many could not understand why the rapid increase in invested capital was not accompanied by a corresponding increase in production. Now they know that the multiplication of securities flotations was a deceptive measure of industrial progress. Money was raised not because it was required to finance expansion, but largely because it was easy to get; because, once obtained, it could be loaned out at rates more remunerative in many instances than the gains of industry.

Dollars that serve too many masters, as in credit pyramiding, are headed for the precipice that always bounds inflation.

STIMULANT

Perhaps because the federal administration has assumed leadership in the "Forward America" movement—a Hooverian idea—business and the public have overestimated the part federal public works will play in stabilizing business and preserving national prosperity. Washington may furnish the stimulant but not the sustaining nutriment.

Last year the federal government spent $232,000,000 for permanent public improvements. The expenditure for the present fiscal year is estimated at $281,000,000. President Hoover's program calls for an increase of $75,000,000 in appropriations for public works next year.

These federal appropriations appear as real factors in the economic scheme until compared with state, municipal, county and private outlays for construction work when they pale into insignificance.

Twenty-six states have appropriated a total of $825,000,000 for public works in 1930. The federal total is but a fraction of that. And last year the national government financed less than four per cent of all construction work.

So, so far as the central government is concerned its contribution to the "prosperity reserve" program must be relatively small. But the president recognizes that fact. It is his hope that the national administration will aid chiefly by co-ordinating federal with state and municipal construction, which is about 10 times as great.

A wise married man never cherishes tobacco or dynamite.

It was jazz—but a jazz apart from the ordinary. It was jazz with a soul. Quiet descended upon the room. The orchestra stopped playing. Lane, proud and happy, looked at the visitors. "Could you care for that in a big way?" he grinned, his eyes sparkling.

"Well, let's see," Lane was amenable to any suggestion. "Maybe we could do something like this: The car with painting of blue is waiting for you. Back in your own back yard . . . Excelsior!" "No, that's not so good," Swanson objected. "The gear shift is what we're interested in." "Listen, Joe, you can figure this out yourself," Phillips interrupted. "I've got to get back to the office. You don't mind, Mr. Swanson, Mr. Jones . . . I've got an appointment in a few moments—important conference. Mr. Lane will fix everything up for you, I know. I'm sure you'll be satisfied with his work. Remember, he's the biggest hit in radioland." With a smile and a nod to Lane, Phillips hurried across the room and disappeared into the corridor. ABRAHAM LINCOLN The Straight Thinker

He said this: "Property is the fruit of labor; property is desirable; it is a positive good in the world. That some should be rich shows that others may become rich, and hence is an encouragement to industry and enterprise. Let not him who is houseless pull down the house of another, let him work diligently and build one for himself, thus by example assuring that his own shall be safe from violence when built."

Many people, who have thrift accounts with us, are acting on this very principle.

Many who wanted homes, got them by the industry and enterprise that Lincoln speaks of. Got them, also, because our plan of home ownership was practical and convenient.

She Finds a Lasting Place in History

On January 1st, 1752, in the city of Philadelphia was born a baby girl who was destined to play a part in the history of our country which time cannot efface. On that day was born Betsy Ross, who plied her needle unceasingly for George Washington's troops and for the Father of our country himself. Betsy Ross was entrusted with the work of making the wonderful flag with its thirteen stripes and circlet of stars, the first flag of freedom of the United States (left). The upholstery shop at Arch Street, Philadelphia, birthplace of Betsy Ross (inset). George Washington, to whom Betsy Ross presented the new flag of the new born nation. (Upper right) Betsy Ross, (lower) Betsy Ross presenting the flag to the Commander-in-Chief of the Revolutionary Army.

(International Newsreel)

LIBERTY, happiness, prosperity, all these wonderful things that we take for granted are symbolized best by our national flag affectionately known as "Old Glory." And it does not take much imagination to visualize how much the designing and making of that flag meant to the band of men in whose hands lay the destinies of an independent people determined to found a country, rather than be a colony.

It is very appropriate, therefore, that the woman who made our first flag, should have been born on January 1. For New Year's Day, 1752, was the birthday of Betsy Ross, the first needlewoman of our country. And although we like to imagine that this is the day of the business woman, it must go on record that Mrs. Ross, young, bright, and very shrewd, ran a very prosperous upholstery business on Arch street, below Third, in Philadelphia. She was the widow of John Ross, nephew of Colonel George Ross, who was one of the committee appointed by Congress in June, 1776, to design a suitable flag for the nation. George Washington, who was one of the committee, had frequently called on Mrs. Ross to embroider his shirt ruffles and do other needlework for him, and so it was to her that he turned for advice about the flag, how it should be made, so that it conformed to the rough drawing that had already been made embodying the ideas of the committee.

Mrs. Ross objected to the six-pointed stars in the original design, suggesting in place the five-pointed star because it was easier to make. To demonstrate the ease with which such a star could be made, the vivacious little widow folded a piece of paper and produced one by a single snip of her scissors. The sketch was redrawn in pencil by George Washington, and with a few minor alterations, a banner that approximated to the ideas of Benjamin Franklin and others who had made suggestions, was adopted. Mrs. Ross was then entrusted with the work of making the wonderful flag with its thirteen red and white stripes and its circle of thirteen white stars, which was to symbolize that the new nation would also be without end—that it would endure for all time. And for her services, Betsy Ross deserves her niche in the hall of great American women.

MRS. JAMES A. GREEN

"For eight years I suffered from ailments of my stomach and kidneys," said Mrs. James A. Green, Saegert wu, Pa. "Gas pains after every meal were frightful and I became so bloated that my heart palpitated and I was short of breath. I never had a real night of sleep and became weak and terribly nervous. Weak kidneys caused pains across my back and frequent bladder actions were a constant annoyance."

"At the suggestion of friends I tried Konjola and took eight bottles in all. It is amazing that one medicine could do for anyone 68 years of age, what Konjola did for me. My stomach ailments are a thing of the past. I no longer bloat after meals and eat what and when I please. My kidneys function as they should and I am no longer disturbed by frequent bladder actions. What a wonderful thing it is to be well again."

A Growing Service

Increasing in Usefulness, Value and Convenience

THE YEAR 1929 was the greatest in Pennsylvania's telephone history.

Eighty thousand telephones were added to the Bell lines in this state.

Eighty thousand new places which, a year ago, could be reached only by personal visit or messenger—now within the sound of your voice.

Your telephone service grows in convenience and value as the number of telephones increases.

In the past year your service has become more useful by 80,000 telephones, in the last five years by 325,000 telephones, in the last ten years by 615,000 telephones—in Pennsylvania alone.

IN 1930 our plans call for an expenditure of $44,000,000 to expand and improve the telephone system. In the coming five years the total will be $215,000,000. These amounts are for new construction only and represent new investments in the business. In addition, the operation and maintenance of the telephone system in Pennsylvania in 1930 will involve an expenditure of over $60,000,000, and in the five-year period a sum of $340,000,000.

Telephone service is essential to modern business and social life. It is important that it continue to expand to meet the needs of the people of Pennsylvania.

The quality of the service was never better than it is today—despite the increasing complexities which are inherent in a growing inter-communication system.

These complexities will continue to increase. But they will be met, and the quality of the service in speed, dependability and general efficiency will continue to improve.

There is no standing still in the Bell system.

B. H. S. GIRLS WIN AS BOYS BOW TO LANGHORNE

As the Bristol high school girls won their first basketball game of the season with ease the high school boys suffered first setback in their first game with the Langhorne quintet, last night at the high school gym here.

The Bristol girls held the lead from the beginning, scoring doubledeckers one after another with McFadden and Rockhill starring. McFadden was high scorer for the girls, making seventeen field goals and six foul goals. Rockhill comes next with six field and two foul goals. Cake, playing left forward for Langhorne, was sole scorer for her team making one field goal and three fouls. Strumfels played a wonderful game as side center, always keeping the ball near Langhorne's basket. McFadden and Rockhill did good team work as forwards enabling McFadden to score nearly two-thirds of the team's points.

The boys' game was more exciting than ever. The first half was fatal to the Bristol quintet. They seemed to be out of shape and their former pep and form was missing. Somehow or other the boys could not get started, leaving the score to run up in Langhorne's favor. Langhorne scored basket after basket and by the end of the first half Langhorne had the advantage over Bristol 23-10.

The beginning of the next canto, however, brought the local five with renewed spirit. They seemed to be refreshed from their short rest and were out to do their best. Berry, forward for Langhorne, starred for his team. He made several beautiful long shots and made the highest score for the boys. He scored ten doubledeckers and 2 foul goals while Green made 2 field goals and 8 one-pointers.

Boys' line-up:
Green right forward Berry
Dougherty left forward Davis
Watt center Stradling
Dries right guard Carter

Substitutes:
Bristol—Milnor for Dougherty, Galzerano for Watt, Tullio for Dries, Laferty for Alta.

Langhorne—Stradling for Stradling, Stradling for Davis, Botke for Carter.

actors had been rounded up, and all recent visitors from outlying provinces had been thoroughly searched and their identities and reputations checked in order to forestall any attempt at a bombing plot.

With very few exceptions, the marriage was witnessed only by persons of royal blood. For the ceremony which thus links two of the oldest sovereign dynasties of Europe took place in the tiny Pauline chapel of the Quirinal Palace, residence of the Italian royal family.

Approximately 100 persons, almost every one bearing regal titles, sat in crimson-draped pews in the historic chapel during the ceremony, while in the reception rooms of the palace adjoining, thousands of invited guests, including high state and ecclesiastical officials and diplomats, waited to greet the newly-wedded couple.

The marriage was performed by Cardinal Maffi, archbishop of Pisa, whom all Italy remembers as having pronounced a Te Deum in the Cathedral of Pisa when the armistice was proclaimed. At that time he lauded the virtues of Italy's "soldier king," an unusual tribute from a church dignitary at a time when the Vatican and the Italian State were still at seemingly hopeless odds.

"Les" Appleton came through with eleven points to have his way for Tullytown's win. Mike DiCicco was good on the defense.

Nickerson and Hooley were best for the Oldtimers. At some times these two would exhibit a bit of their old form and wipe the youngsters off their feet.

Even though Mrs. Adler declined to state whether the ceremony is to take place in Philadelphia or New York, she admitted that the bride-to-be is Mrs. Goodkind, mother-in-law of Lessing Rosenwald, son of the philanthropist.

At first, when questioned, Mrs. Adler said only that Rosenwald "will have an announcement to make in New York Thursday." She was asked if this would be after the ceremony. She hesitated and smiled then said: "Yes, it will be after the ceremony."

"Only a few members of each family will be present," said Mrs. Adler, speaking of the ceremony. "It will be celebrated in the utmost simplicity."

The couple will leave for a cruise of the Mediterranean afterward, it was reported here.

While Mrs. Adler was vaguely discussing the impending wedding, other relatives of the financier maintained their previous denials.

YOU can judge a man by his nickname, not so much by the sobriquet itself as by eligibility to be publicly quoted. For all nicknames are not complimentary and many a famous man would be surprised were he to discover the label that his staff or the public have devised for him.

Washington is the home of the sobriquet and the government is its fertile breeding ground. Men who are well-liked are nearly always referred to by their nickname, and the uninitiated often has a hard time keeping track of the various names that characterize the great and near-great. President Hoover is invariably referred to as "The Chief," not because of the office he holds but because it is the name given him when he was Secretary of Commerce. To Mrs. Hoover he is "Bert," the only other byname he has ever had. When "Charlie" is mentioned in official circles, the initiated know that Vice-President Curtis is under discussion. This nickname has supplanted his former nickname, "Big Chief," which is descriptive of his Indian origin.

The Secretary of State is known as "Stim" at the State Department, and the Assistant Secretary, Joseph P. Cotton, is affectionately known as "Uncle Joe." The very good looking and cordial Assistant Secretary of the Navy is known as Commodore, not because of his naval affiliations, but because that happens to be the sobriquet given to him years ago in his home town, New Orleans. General Summerall, Chief of Staff of the Army, is known as "Sitting Bull," to immortalize the name of his telephone exchange in France during the World War.

Nicknames are many in the Senate, and when given they generally stick. Thus Senator Hiram Johnson is known to his colleagues as "Hi," and if another Hiram is elected to the Senate he will have to find another nickname for there cannot be more than one "Hi" as far as the Capitol is concerned. "Coley" sounds like a school nickname, but it is the sobriquet bestowed on Cole Blease, of South Carolina. "Doc" Copeland is, of course, that very popular physician and politician, Senator Copeland. La Follette is "Little Bob," while Brock of Tennessee is the "Candy Kid."
